

Call for Application

Online Summer School | June 11-13, 2024

Are you a graduate student studying Canada from outside the country? Are you looking for a space to discuss your ideas with like-minded individuals, emerging and established Canadianists?

The Robarts Centre for Canadian Studies, the Avie Bennett Historica Canada Chair in Canadian History and the International Council for Canadian Studies are looking for graduate students specialized in the study of Canada but located outside of the country to participate to an online summer school.

Summer school participants will be invited to share their research interests and to see how they connect to key themes in a critical study of Canada, including the following:

- Transformative reconciliation with Indigenous peoples
- Environmental racism in and from Canada
- Extractivism, gender and national identity

Most panels will be held in English, but some will be held in French. Knowledge of French is not a condition to apply.

Apply here
by April 4,
2024

Benefits

- Discussions on more practical aspects of academia (i.e. writing and publishing workshops & networking opportunities)
- 20 participants will be selected to participate to the summer school. A small stipend of $CAD 200 will be provided to selected participants